The Kernale Kaia Samarkarke Vedi (1804) is a socio-cultural organisation of Kannadis or Malayalees which was established in 1906 with the objective of bringing together all the Malayalees residing and working in the capitaligram under one umbrella that would enable them not only to show-case the rich and varied culture of the state of Kerala but also to work for the welfare of the community and the State of Arunachal Pradesh. The Kernale Kaia Samarkarke Vedi has been striving hard to promote the culture, cuisine and other rich traditional practices of the Malayalees since its inception and it has been successful in its venture to a great extent. The organization has also always encouraged imparting all the good practices from other cultures to further enrich their own Kerala culture. In an effort to bridge the state of Kerala with other states, KKSV often organizes cultural exchange programmes that help in creating a cultural mosaic and unity in diversity.

It is a proud moment for the Malayalees residing in the capital to witness the Silver Jubilee celebration of Onam on 14th September this year. The Onam festival celebration that started with a humble beginning in the year 1994 has today grown into a 24 glorious years of its celebrations in the capital. Today, Onam festival is celebrated as a huge calendar event for the Malayalees and other festival enthusiasts in the capital. The Silver Jubilee of Onam festival will be celebrated with enthusiasm, gaiety and pomp and show in which attractive programmes shall be included. It is worth mentioning here that today, there are about 350 Malayalee families in the capital who are wholeheartedly contributing towards the growth of Malayalee culture.

MYTHOLOGY OF ONAM

According to the legend, Onam festival was started by an Asura (Demons) king named as Mahabali or Manek. The king was greatly admired and revered in the kingdom for his kindness and generosity. It is believed that Kerala witnessed the golden era of all-round prosperity during the reign of King Mahabali. There was no discrimination on the basis of caste, creed, colour, economic status and everybody was treated equally for the society. There was peace and tranquility in the state and crimes and criminals were never heard of. It is said that during his reign, people did not use locks and keys at their homes because they were never afraid of fear or be wary of people. The people were prosperous and poverty and misery were not heard of during his reign.

The people of Kerala even to-day believe that the proud soul of the noble and benevolent king Mahabali visits the people every year during the Onam to inquire about the well-being of his people. This is how Onam festival is being celebrated by the Malayalees in the honour of their beloved king Mahabali. During Onam every household in Kerala irrespective of rich or poor, young or old, welcome the king with love and happiness. They decorate their homes with myriads of flowers called Alappoojukalam and other beautiful decorations to mark the occasion. Onam also heralds the harvest season in Kerala. (The writer is the General Secretary of KKSV).

Criterias of Central Funding should not be based on Population for States: Khandu

Khandu, speaking at the 68th Plenary of the North East Council (NEC) here today, Khandu said most developmental schemes of the Govt of India, whether in the creation of infrastructure, works are based on population event for the sector inquiry have low demography but large geographical areas, a leading role, remote, hostile and challenging terrains.

"For a state like Arunachal Pradesh, the quantum of funding under various Central Sector Schemes should not be based on population and must take into account special conditions of the state," he stressed.

Arunachal Pradesh is prone to several natural disasters on account of heavy rainfall resulting in landslides, floods and other calamities which cause large scale destruction of houses, standing crops and other private property besides damage to infrastructure. Khandu said the relief grants that the state receives from Govt of India to mitigate the effects of such calamities is insufficient and needs to be revisited substantially.

Chief Minister Array Khandu said the major challenge for development, he said in Arunachal Pradesh around 700-800 rural habitations are still unconnected by roads and therefore they do not qualify for funding under PMGSY. However, as a special case, he said he had requested roads for 250 habitations in East Siang, 90 habitations in West Siang, required for development under NEGS.

The state government has already constructed necessary infrastructure at Pasighat and Lilabari for facilitation of border trade. He hoped that the state will soon be facilitated to make operations with immediate effect. Pasighat Port marks the international border with Myanmar and is lying unused due to political and developmental delay of the project. Khandu said sufficient funds should be made available under NEGS for development of Sports Infrastructure in NE States and Arunachal Pradesh in particular to conduct the game on national level. He also congratulated the Arunachal Pradesh Football Association (APFA) for taking the onerous responsibility of conducting a tournament of such magnitude.

The Chief Minister further said, under NEGS, the criteria for deciding the quantum of funding for states can be revised substantially.
