World Student’s Day

Unarguably the most loved President of India, APJ Abdul Kalam was a scientist who made India proud with his missile defence programme. But his favourite job was teaching and that’s how he wanted the world to remember him. Due to his love for students and focus on promoting education, the United Nations declared his birthday (October 15) as ‘World Student’s Day’ in 2010.

Such was his aura that students across the nation looked up to him. His quotes are still shared on social networking sites. His sudden demise on July 27, 2015 shocked the nation but Kalam died doing what he loved best: teaching. Delivering a lecture to the students of IIM Shillong, Kalam fell down the stage suffering a stroke and passed away almost instantly. The entire nation grieved his demise irrespective of caste, creed, location or religion. A scientist of global repute, Kalam was respected worldwide. In 2005, Kalam visited Switzerland, after which the country declared May 26 to be observed as ‘Science Day’ as a mark of respect and in honour of his visit.

The list of awards bestowed on Kalam is endless. In 1981, he was awarded the Padma Bhushan and in 1990, the Padma Vibhushan. He was later awarded the Bharat Ratna for his contributions to research, the field of space, and the Indian armed forces. He was also given the title of ‘Draupadi’ (warrior) by the Indian government.

Kalam was a gem the nation will treasure forever. It is due to his contribution to India’s space programme that we can now reach the moon. With his official title as ‘Mr. Missile’, Kalam was instrumental in the development of India’s first satellite. As the chief test oficial of the Guided Weapons Development Establishment (GWDE) of RRL, Kalam had a key role in the development of India’s Agni series of ballistic missiles. He was also a key figure in the development of India’s advanced ASAT (Anti-Satellite) capabilities.

The innovative and visionary leader, Kalam was a true inspiration to the Indian youth. His quote, “If we think we can do a thing, we can do it.” has become a mantra for the Indian youth.

The Kalam Institute of National Excellence (KINEx), a non-profit organization, was established in 2010 to continue Kalam’s legacy. The institute provides a platform for young minds to explore their potential and develop their skills in various fields.

It is a fitting tribute to Kalam that the nation is observing World Student’s Day with his life as the central theme. Let us remember his contribution to India and the world and strive to carry forward his legacy.

Suicide among the Idu Mishmis: A critical psycho-analytical problem

Jomonro Rondo, D.D. Research Officer

The Idu Mishmis are a Scheduled Tribe residing in the Eastern Himalayan region of Arunachal Pradesh. This tribe, mostly living in the West Kameng District, has a population of about 10,000 people. They are known for their unique cultural practices and traditional beliefs. In recent years, there has been a growing concern about the rising rate of suicide among the Idu Mishmis, which has become a serious public health issue.

Introduction

The Idu Mishmis (Karanag) are one of the major tribes of the Eastern Himalayan region. The West Kameng District, where most of the Idu Mishmis reside, has a geographical location in the eastern part of Arunachal Pradesh, where the Indo-Nepalese border is situated. The geographical location in the east of Arunachal Pradesh, where the Idu Mishmis are situated in several locations including in the district of Tawang and Singpho, is one of the major reasons for the rise in suicide rates among the Idu Mishmis.

Social Scientific Explanation

Social scientists like Durkheim have tried to prove that all suicides are connected with war and that the social disorganization connected with war are basically resulting in extreme unhappiness in the individuals and this unhappiness causes the suicidal tendencies. Similarly, some sociologists argue that social factors are related to suicides. The social factors that are connected with suicide are very critical and cannot be ignored. There is a clear link between social factors and suicide. The social factors include economic, political, social, and cultural factors. Economic factors like poverty, unemployment, and lack of resources are connected with suicide. Political factors like war, political instability, and corruption are also connected with suicide. Social factors like family structure, social support, and social isolation are also connected with suicide. Cultural factors like traditional beliefs and practices are also connected with suicide.

Psychological Explanation

Psychologists argue that various psychological factors are connected with suicide. Some of these factors include depression, anxiety, and stress. Depression is a mood disorder that affects the way a person feels, thinks, and behaves. Anxiety is a feeling of worry or unease about something that is happening or might happen. Stress is a feeling of being under too much pressure. These psychological factors are connected with suicide because they can lead to a person feeling unable to cope with the demands of life.

Cultural Explanation

Cultural factors like traditional beliefs and practices are also connected with suicide. The Idu Mishmis have their own unique cultural practices and traditions. The cultural practices like the practice of sati, where the wife of a deceased husband immolates herself on his funeral pyre, are connected with suicide. These cultural practices are connected with the practice of sati, where the wife of a deceased husband immolates herself on his funeral pyre. This practice is connected with the belief that the soul of the deceased husband will reap the benefits of the wife's immolation.

Conclusion

The rising rate of suicide among the Idu Mishmis is a serious public health issue. It is essential to understand the various factors connected with suicide to develop effective prevention strategies. The government, healthcare providers, and the community need to work together to develop effective prevention strategies. The government needs to provide financial support to develop suicide prevention programs. Healthcare providers need to provide mental health services to the community. The community needs to develop traditional beliefs and practices that are connected with suicide. It is essential to develop a comprehensive approach to suicide prevention that includes various factors connected with suicide.
